Take the log of both sides. You can take any log you want, but remember that you actually need to solve the equation with this log, so you should with common or natural logs only. Using the common log on both sides gives you  $\log 4 \cdot 3 \cdot x^{-1} = \log 11$ . Use the power rule to drop down the exponent. This step gives you  $(3x - 1)\log 4 = \log 11$ .
